

SAN VITTORE FALLS TO AMERICANS IN ITALY

The War
Today...By DeWitt MacKenzie
AP War Analyst

QUITE AN international flurry was caused yesterday by Stockholm's grapevine report that Allied troops had invaded Yugoslavia—a sensation which still retains elements of great interest despite the quick statement at Allied headquarters in Algiers that the story was "completely erroneous".

Apparently what happened was that somebody with a magnifying glass mistook a grain of truth for a sand storm. It's a fact that America and Britain for a considerable time have been sending mischievous officers and technical experts into Yugoslavia to assist Marshal Tito in his violent manhandling of Hitler's harried troops. Presumably a contingent of such specialists was mistaken for part of an amphibious fighting force.

Yugoslavia and the rest of the Balkans are an increasingly hot spot because of the fast-moving Russian offensive towards Rumania—gateway to the peninsula. As this column has pointed out previously, the Balkans have been the bulwark protecting the right flank of the Fuehrer's great Russian line. The corollary is that if the Nazi chief can be deprived of this Balkan shield, his right wing to the north will be in a bad way.

Marshal Tito, having pulled a guerrilla army out of his hat, has been out-smarting a numerically superior force of regulars from one of the most powerful fighting-machines the world has known. Because of that the Allies have been giving him all the assistance possible. This has included an all-out effort, both by bombing and by psychological pressure, to compel neighboring Bulgaria to forsake the Germans.

Bulgaria is the lever with which the Allies could turn the Balkan misadventure bottom side up—if they could get hold of the lever. The situation is complicated, as one could expect in the unfathomable Balkans, but Bulgaria's attitude is bound to depend heavily on what Turkey does. Should the Turks enter the war on the Allied side, the presumption is that Bulgaria would desert Hitler and make a play for Allied democracy.

THAT PASSES the play along to Turkey. At the time of the Moscow conference of the Big Three—America, Russia and Britain—there was a lot of talk that the Turks were about to join the Allies. The three great powers pushed the Turks hard, as I understand it, but while Ankara pledged full loyalty to the Allies, the government deferred taking the plunge into actual warfare.

Why did the Turks hold back?

Steel Rate To Climb
YOUNGSTOWN, Jan. 8.—Steel production in the Youngstown district next week will jump six points to 95 per cent of capacity, tentative schedules show.

Republic Steel Corp. is adding six open hearths, five here and one at Warren. The company's output has been lagging for about a month through reduced war orders.

Tentative schedules show all three Bessemer, 73 of the 83 open hearths and all 26 blast furnaces will be in operation.

'First Lady' Dies

Mrs. Herbert Hoover

MRS. HOOVER
DIES SUDDENLYHeart Attack Is Fatal To America's 'First Lady'
From 1929 to 1933(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Mrs. Herbert Hoover, America's "First Lady" from 1929 to 1933, died.

With former President Hoover at her side, she died unexpectedly at their Waldorf Towers apartment last night, shortly after she was stricken with an acute heart attack at 7 o'clock (EWT).

Mrs. Hoover, who was 68, had just returned from a concert and appeared in good health. Then the stroke came, just as her husband was telling her goodbye preparatory to leaving for a dinner.

Her personal physician, Dr. Ralph H. Boots, was summoned immediately, but Mrs. Hoover was dead in a few minutes.

Notification of her death was sent immediately to her two sons, Allan Hoover, a California rancher, and Herbert Hoover, Jr., a radio engineer.

Since leaving the White House the Hoovers have lived at their home in Palo Alto, Calif., and for the past several years also had maintained the apartment here.

Typical American Woman
Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, chancellor emeritus of Stanford university and close friend of the Hoovers, paid tribute to Mrs. Hoover as "a typical American woman."

"She was a great success as a mother, wife, a friend, as the president's lady of the White House and as an executive of the Girl Scouts," said Dr. Wilbur.

The educator said he had known the former Lou Henry, daughter of Charles D. Henry, a Waterbury, Ia., banker, since she was a high school girl, and "she has never changed."

Harold D. Smith, manager of the J. C. Penney Co. store, today was named county chairman of the March of Dimes campaign which will be conducted the last of this month.

The appointment was made by E. M. Stephenson, county chairman of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. Money raised in this drive will be used to take care of paralysis cases.

Smith immediately appointed the same local chairmen who served in last year's campaign in the various communities of the county. They are: Floyd W. McKee, Salem; J. Homer Browne, Lisbon; Joseph R. Leeson, Lectoria; Earl H. Newell, Columbiana; Dale Gibson, East Palestine; Earl A. Baker, Wellsville; Judge Homer Hammond, chairman of courthouse and granges.

Foundation officers in addition to Chairman Stephenson are Harold Muser, treasurer; Ralph Hawley, secretary.

COUNTY WAR
BOND CHIEFS
GATHER HERESupplies and Instructions
For Fourth Loan Drive
Given Chairmen

Instructions and suggestions for conducting the Fourth War Loan drive were given at a meeting of county leaders in the Memorial building last night, presided over by County Chairman L. H. Colley.

Chairmen and other community leaders received their supplies after listening to an instructive talk by Herman J. Sheedy of Cleveland, vice chairman of Area One. Sheedy gave the workers many pointers, the result of experience in the first three drives.

The campaign opens Tuesday Jan. 18, and from that date until Feb. 1 workers will confine their efforts to individual sales. From then until the drive ends Feb. 15, corporations, institutions and other organizations will be solicited to buy War Bonds.

Most of the cities in the county are planning to follow the program already worked out for Salem, which includes house to house solicitation, with separate drives in the business and shop districts. This time clerks in stores will be asked to sell bonds, each one being given a quota of $200 for the drive.

With a quota of $6,283,000 for the county, each community has been given a quota which is broken down into the various issues, as follows:

Columbiana—Total quota $527,772; E bonds $145,200; F and G bonds $38,150; other issues $39,850; total individual quota, $251,200; corporations, etc., $276,572.

Lectoria—Total quota $131,943; E bonds $36,300; F and G $9,150; other issues $17,450; total individual quota $92,800; corporations, etc., $39,143.

Lisbon—Total quota $432,810; E bonds $121,000; F and G $50,170; other issues $58,150; total individual quota $200,300; corporations, etc., $232,510.

New Waterford—Total quota $125,660; E bonds $34,600; F and G $8,600; other issues $16,600; total individual quota $58,800; corporations, etc., $66,860.

East Palestine—Total quota $408,395; E bonds $112,400; F and G $295,995.

ROCKET PLANES
IN INVASION?Major de Seversky Predicts
Widespread Use
By Allied Forces(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Jet-propelled aircraft, with terrific speed and proven efficiency at great altitudes, will be "a highly important tactical weapon" against the Axis and may even be used in the invasion of Europe from the west, Major Alexander P. de Seversky predicted today.

"Before this war is over, jet propulsion of aircraft may be very much in use by the Allies," the noted aeronautical engineer, designer and air warfare strategist said in an interview in which he explained the rocket principle.

De Seversky discussed jet propulsion when asked to comment on the announcement Thursday by the U. S. Army Air Forces and the RAF that British-American engineering laboratories had turned out a new plane without standard propellers.

De Seversky declared that for the present the jet propulsion principle would not be employed to any great extent for long sustained flying.

Sees Early Use
He said he believed it would be used in the near future principally for home defense aircraft and as interceptors for short range flying, because of its high fuel consumption.

"But," he added, "we may be able to install the rocket engines in bombers."

CITY HOSPITAL

Fund Reaches $41,000;
Goal Is $150,000

The campaign to raise a building fund for enlargement and improvement of Salem City hospital is making much progress, it was indicated by reports of solicitors at a meeting called by Chairman South Metzger at the Lape hotel Friday.

The campaign got under way about three weeks ago and to date pledges and cash total $41,000, the Salem solicitors reported. Of this amount, the doctors have contributed $10,300.

The goal was set at $150,000, to be paid during the next two years so a fund will be available when building supplies and material can be obtained following their release for war needs.

Of this amount, Salem has set out to raise $90,000, with quotas covering the balance required given to Columbiana, Lectoria, Lisbon and East Palestine. Yesterday no reports were available from any of these towns except Columbiana, which reported it was well on its way to raising its goal of $35,000.

Money raised in this campaign will not be used for any purpose except the building program. A building and planning committee has been named by the hospital trustees to include Louis Probst, chairman; N. C. Hunt, L. H. Colley and Dr. Lea Cobbs of Salem; Homer Detweiler and Dr. F. W. Trader of Columbiana.

Nazis Thrown Off Balance
In Invasion Guessing Game(By Associated Press)
LONDON, Jan. 8.—The Russian New Year offensive, considered in the light of the Teheran unification of strategy among the Allies, is keeping the Germans off-balance in their guessing as to when the western invasion will begin.

Obviously the opening of the second front will be keyed closely with the tie-up of the maximum number of German forces.

Late April or early May is the period generally speculated upon as invasion time, but by then the Red army may be at low ebb if the present exhausting offensive continues. Besides April and May are the mud months on the continent.

The Nazi-controlled Paris radio has been deducing that the steadily mounting American and British invasion force actually will delay the blow until late spring to permit coordination with a new Russian attack.

Red Armies Drive Deeper
Into Old Polish Territory(By Associated Press)
MOSCOW, Jan. 8.—Troops of the First and Second Ukrainian armies poured through great gaps in the German lines in swift advances today and units which had surrounded Kirovograd smashed to within three miles of the city in one place in the Dniester bend country, as the Red army's winter offensive continued on the upsurge.

Advance units of the force which captured Klesow, at the northern tip of the great drive, were plunging deeper into Rovno province (eastern part of old Poland), and reached a point within 12 miles of Sarny.

Pay For Remodeling
Of Broadway Home

With remodeling of the new home on S. Broadway well under way, the Salvation Army building fund is still short about $1,500.

A total of $5,500 has been raised to put the building, donated by N. C. Hunt for a new Salvation Army home, in condition for such use.

The cost of these improvements is estimated at about $8,000.

Plasterers have been at work this week getting the walls in shape and a new front is being constructed. A stage has been built at the rear of the main floor, which will be used for the Army's meetings, and the basement is being fixed up for use as a recreational room. It is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy within a short time.

Contributions to the building fund have been received by The News as well as by personal solicitation. Any amounts, large or small, will be accepted by The News and turned over to the treasurer, E. M. Stephenson.

Nazis Thrown Off Balance
In Invasion Guessing Game

commentators, however, have warned that an onslaught anywhere from Norway to southern France may come while the present Russian drive is raging in force.

They pegged that conclusion to the currently popular Nazi propaganda that Premier Stalin is hurrying his Allies to action before they are prepared.

Best Allied views available here is that neither mud nor the state of the Red army offensive necessarily is an accurate invasion barometer.

As even some German spokesmen have pointed out a western front does not require coordination to an active Russian offensive since even the threat of a possible attack serves to prevent the Germans from weakening their eastern force to reinforce the west.

That already has proved true in reverse, with Russian attacks taking advantage of the fact the Germans are afraid to weaken their western defenses to meet acute needs on the Russian front.

Late Columbus Lawyer
Wills 'Kids' $800,000COLUMBUS, Jan. 8.—The will of a Columbus attorney today allocated $800,000 for establishment of a home to be operated like the widely-known Nebraska Boys' Town.

Charles S. Cherington, 89, who died childless last Dec. 30, bequeathed the sum to provide a home of "children who are orphaned or without the care and support of parents."

The attorney asked that the institution for both boys and girls be named the Julia Hurst Cherington memorial home, in honor of his mother.

The will specifies that the institution be operated like boys' town, "as near as possible" by the children themselves, and that they be taught agriculture and the attributes of "industry, economy, thrift, self-support, independence, helpfulness and good citizenship."

Nazis Fight Desperately

Front line dispatches said the fate of the German garrison at Kirovograd was already decided.

They said the Germans were now battling desperately to halt the westward drive toward Novoukrainka, junction on the next to last escape railway left open to German forces in the Smala area between the Kirovograd and the Kiev offensives.

In the Kiev offensive, the Soviet southwestward drive was tightening a noose about Vinnitsa from three sides.

Vinnitsa, Bug river garrison point for the Odessa-Wasaw railway junction of Zhmerinka, lies 20 miles northeast of Zhmerinka and less than 50 miles from the Dniester river, the pre-war Rumanian border.

The entire German position was described as shaping up as one of the most disastrous in Hitler's Russian campaign.

Aircraft Production
Double Last Year's

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—America's war planes left the assembly lines at a rate of 339 for each working day in December, the Aircraft Production board reports in announcing that 1943 production nearly doubled the output of 1942.

Last month 8,802 planes were produced. Production had been scheduled at 9,600 for the month but Executive Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson of the War Production board hinted at the reason for failure to reach the goal with the reference to a "lag in deliveries x x x over the Christmas holidays."

December output brought the year's total to 85,945 military planes of all types, compared with 1942 production of 47,873.

Meanwhile, it was learned the WPB is preparing to revise drastically its "order M-126" which not only barred iron and steel in a long list of goods, but also any substitute metals except gold and silver.

There was no indication of which of the more than 1,200 "banned" items would be sent back into production for civilian markets.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Algiers, Jan. 8.—Victorious American troops massed around captured San Vittore today forming a spearhead which stormed at the outer defenses of Cassino, 70 straight-line miles from Rome.

The fall of the fiercely-defended little mountain village of San Vittore alongside the Via Cassina was disclosed yesterday by Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead. His dispatch from the front said San Vittore had been seized Thursday after a violent 40-hour battle from house to house. The village is six miles from Cassino.

The capture was confirmed today in the headquarters communique, which said the Fifth army had advanced all along a 10-mile front on both sides of the road.

Even before this official announcement, the Americans had smashed on in the direction of Cassino and were fighting in the streets of Giusto, a tiny village more than half a mile to the north.

Allied units in the Fifth army south of the Rome road matched this advance by driving through mine fields and past pillboxes to reach Mt. Porchia, a 900-foot height two miles southwest of San Vittore.

This peak controls the road all the way to Cassino, which itself now is within easy range of Allied big guns, but reports from the front said the Germans had built a gigantic defense ring around the important junction, fortifying every house in every village and farm community along the way.

On the northern end of the Fifth army's front Allied forces pushed on from captured 3,500-foot Mt. Maio and captured a nearby 4,000-foot peak south of Viteuso.

Bitter See-Saw Warfare
North of Viteuso, however, the Germans recaptured Mt. Raimo, but this bitter see-saw mountain warfare in central Italy had no immediate relation to the Fifth army's offensive in the Cassino area, now in its fourth day.

Across the peninsula, the Eighth army engaged in strong patrol activity, today's communique said, while Allied bombers pounded the airfield at Perugia in central Italy, blasted an aircraft factory at Maribor in northern Yugoslavia, struck at railway yards at Plume in northeastern Italy and lashed at shipping off the Yugoslav coast.

The ground communique, reporting the Fifth army advance, said in one area troops fought their way to the top of a 4,000-foot peak, while other units reached Monte Porchia, two miles southwest of San Vittore, dominating the road to Cassino.

ALLIES POUND
BASES OF JAPSTake Advantage of Lull In Ground Fighting In Pacific War Theater(By Associated Press)
Taking advantage of a lull in ground fighting, Allied planes concentrated on smashing at supply lines on which the Japanese depend to feed and reinforce their troops on island bases in the Southwest Pacific.

War planes sweeping low over waters of New Britain and New Guinea, destroyed or damaged a total of 30 barges, and left their mark on two surface ships at Cape Dampier, New Britain.

The enemy suffered an estimated 100 casualties when fighters sank two barges loaded with troops in Blanche Bay at Rabaul, New Britain, once a busy port for Japanese warships and cargo ships.

Awaiting Better Chance
As to why the Japanese fleet doesn't come out and fight, Secretary of the Navy Knox observed that probably they are "waiting for a time when they'll have a better chance—they hope." In the meantime, "our men, ships and planes are growing and when they do come out there can be only one ultimate result."

Intermittent fighting continued in the vicinity of Borgen bay at the Cape Gloucester, New Britain, invasion front held by United States Marines. American ground patrols reported only light contact with the enemy in the Sador area on the north coast of New Guinea.

Australian forces continued their unbroken advance up the Huon peninsula, and only 65 miles remained between them and the American army unit at Sador.

Chinese soldiers have opened a new offensive to clear the Japanese from the path of the New Burma road in Burma and in Yunnan province, Southwest China, with the support of the U. S. Army Air Force.

Dairymple said the band builders "willfully and maliciously violated the contract" between the union and management and failed to comply with the union's constitution and no strike pledge.

Harper said efforts of union leaders to induce the men to go back to work were unsuccessful. The stoppage was attributed to layoffs of four workers. The company withheld comment.

PUBLIC SURPLUSES AFTER THE WAR

Gov. Dewey of New York is latest to deal with the tender subject of surplus funds piled up by wartime revenues and secured against spending attacks by shortages of material and labor. New York's surplus, reports the governor in his annual message to the legislature, has reached a total of $140,000,000, reflecting the state's large population and tremendous wealth.

This money, recommends Gov. Dewey, should be set aside for post-war public works designed to create employment, with the governor holding veto power over legislative decisions on its use. As in Ohio, with its surplus, the recommendation runs contrary to the spenders, who cannot stand the thought of public money not being wasted, but Gov. Dewey apparently is as capable of fending them off as Gov. Bricker has proved to be in this state.

There is one doubt raised, however, by the assumption that a public surplus should be earmarked for public works over and above those which, though on established schedules, had to be delayed on account of war. Particularly if it turned out—as it may, contrary to the sour predictions of those who have no faith in post-war prosperity—that no public-created employment was going to be needed immediately after the war, the money might be spent on little more than glorified boondoggles. Taxpayers might get a better break if the money also could be applied to tax reduction; thus becoming a net saving, instead of a net addition to public spending.

DISINTEGRATING FRONT

Even though communiques continue to mention Germany's "front" in Russia, German admissions and Russian claims reveal that it is a battle line in process of disintegration. Already it has been cut in the middle and partly enveloped at the southern extremity.

Behind it is the uncertainty of conditions in Poland and Rumania. The Germans have lost not only the railroads which served as the arteries of their supply system, but also the security of the back areas through which supplies reach them. In retreat, they are confronted with the imminent possibility of disorder as their prestige and fighting power diminish.

There is now every reason to believe that by the end of the winter the German front in Russia will be gone, replaced by whatever policy the Kremlin develops for dealing with the Germans as they fall back through the Balkans, Poland and the Baltic states. If this results in German ability to shift more and more troops from the eastern to the western front, the effect on the scheduled invasion will be momentous.

Anyone becoming preoccupied with legalistic questions of Russia's right to close with the Germans in territory west of the old Russian border has failed to realize the fateful possibilities if Hitler's hordes should be allowed to break off their war with Russia and reassemble in western Europe to deal with the United States and Great Britain in full strength.

NO BARN BURNERS

Renewed agitation for a national service act in the wake of the latest strike flurry follows the formula of action and reaction which has characterized discussion of this deeply controversial proposal. After each wave of work stoppages, proponents of national service legislation grow vocal, and the result of their agitation is another period of inactivity.

Before the United States experimented with anything as drastic as universal conscription, its native common sense would demand preliminary measures to clear up the causes of irresponsibility and bad discipline among those who would be chiefly affected by such a law. It would slap a penalty, instead of a premium, on those who adopt the John L. Lewis technique of twisting Uncle Sam's arm to get what they want. It would insist on government saying what it means, instead of kidding the public into believing it was aiming to do one thing and calling itself a liar by doing something else. It would demand that the Byrneses, Vinsens and war labor boards who can go so far and no further either be given authority to do what they are professing to be able to do or get out. It would not give its approval, smiling or otherwise, to any proposal for burning down the barn to rescue the bureaucratic horses.

In fact, this might be just as good a time as any to bring universal conscription to a showdown in congress. Those who think they might be able to build it through without doing a lot of housecleaning first might as well have their eyes opened now.

GET A HORSE!

There is something to be learned from the ironic circumstance that the aviation industry and, to some extent, the automobile industry seem to be afraid of the people's imagination as applied to post-war transportation.

Specifically, they seem to fear that popular acceptance of the idea that the sky will be full of flivver planes and helicopters and the super-highways covered with low-price, high-efficiency teardrop models is going to lead to disappointment. At least, their spokesmen are spending a good deal of time warning the people not to expect too much.

Perhaps the people have placed the cart before the horse and are building up their expectations higher than the engineering facts justify. But this is not necessarily a bad thing; rather, it is the first time that mechanical improvements have been made a matter of demand. Originally, the automobile and plane were resisted, not anticipated. So were many of the other mechanical improvements that created the national legend of mechanical ingenuity.

It has taken a long time to create a public attitude of anticipation, to stimulate the people's imagination to the point where it wants things not already in existence, where it stimulates designers and engineers to greater effort. If the cart has been before the horse, the modern credo is to get another horse and have one pushing and one pulling. Instead of advising the public not to expect too much, spokesmen for the aviation and automobile industries should rise to the occasion.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, January 9

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a most auspicious and happy one for all affairs of church and state, with promise of expansion, enhanced prestige, increased finances and power, both to organizations and to individuals dedicated to noble, progressive and philanthropic, social and political welfare.

Those whose birthday it is may be on the eve of great promise for the fulfillment of their cherished hopes and wishes. Business, credit, finance, prestige and personal popularity are benignly enhanced under the current rule. Beneath the elements of progress and sudden factors of productivity is a sound and stabilizing influence promising future security and comfort. Sentimental and social attachments also flourish.

A child born on this day may be well equipped for an important, progressive and influential career, with its fortunes and happiness on firm foundations.

For Monday, January 10

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a definite success for all those plans and propositions carefully worked out and organized, with a view to stability and endurance. Objectives may be lofty and purposeful but demand concentrated effort and diligence.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year in which their affairs and objectives looking to future security and well-being, should engage their most thoughtful consideration. The forces, faculties and ideas should be centered on such fundamental ambitions and aspirations, under organized and constructive plans for consolidating the future and its enjoyments.

A child born on this day may be blessed with stable, far seeing and enduring elements for assuring a comfortable, happy and responsible future. Elders and relatives may encourage this attitude and objective.

When the war has continued one year, it certainly is lessened by one year, but this fact is not likely to comfort us since we are completely uncertain how long the war still must continue and what we will have to endure.—Finnish Prime Minister Edwin Linkomies.

The Jap is retreating. His boastful spirit is also on the run. Where he used to taunt us to "come out and fight," he now whines that our preponderance of power is superior almost to the point of unfairness.—Adm. William F. Halsey.

Oldtime Remedies Still Efficacious

home one night and had a couple of chills and a temperature of 101 degrees, and a bounding pulse of 100, and respiration of 20.

Well, I naturally sent for my doctor, J. H. W. That combination of symptoms suggests pneumonia to any doctor. J. H. W. and I went over her chest. We didn't have an X-ray, so we had to use our native senses. Now I happen to be one of the four best physical diagnosticians—meaning using percussions and listening with the stethoscope—in North America. The others are Oscar Bethea, of New Orleans; Andy Anderson, of Los Angeles; and John Maslins, of Montreal. And J. H. W. is the best physical diagnostician in West Missouri. And going over her chest carefully we could not find any evidence of pneumonia.

So J. H. W. said, maybe it is deep and hasn't come to the surface yet. How about giving her a sulfa drug?

Old Fashioned Remedies
And I said, well, she is of the allergic type, and the sulfa will give her an eruption and make her awful sick. I hate to do it. So we gave her some aspirin and just a little codeine.

The next day her temperature was normal and she felt fine. J. H. W. said to me—"You are not out in practice as much as I am. Do you realize that nine out of ten citizens of this town in her condition last night would have been given sulfadiazine. With all these doctors around here who haven't got training enough to know pneumonia when they hear it. And this morning the good results would have been ascribed to the sulfadiazine—another triumph for the sulfa drugs. Paul de

Not that the sulfa drugs are not all right in their place. But desperate remedies, used as desperate pills, as well as vice versa. What has become of the use of water? Hippocrates wrote a book on Air, Water and Places in 400 B. C. It is still good practice. With water alone, no swallowing of drugs, you can induce sleep, quiet pain, relieve a sore throat, clear out the bowels, and flush out the sinuses.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

T. J.: Please tell me what a man's blood pressure should be at the age of 65 years, and if blood pressure is curable and what is a safe blood pressure.

Answer: A systolic blood pressure all the way from 150 to 180 is normal at 65. Blood pressure is an adjustment; it is higher in elderly people in order to keep the organs and muscles supplied with blood. To change it very much is more dangerous than to let it alone.

G. D.: I suffer from anemia and would like to know what foods to eat in order to enrich my blood.
Answer: Spinach, carrots, grapes, prunes, meat, whole wheat, beans, almonds, eggs.

K. H.: Would a man 30 years of age who has had a hernia since the age of two and had three operations be eligible for the draft?
Answer: No.

"THAT KEITH WOMAN"

by PHYLLIS MOORE GALLAGHER

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

Hornblower took a stand in the center of the room under the pendant drop of the crystal chandelier. His hands were behind his back, and his bald head gleamed in the sunlight. He fixed those piercing dark eyes at each of them in turn. When they pierced me, I slid away and came back to the hole into my head.... sweat dripped out of my temples and, for the life of me, I couldn't control my tongue.

"Where's Reginald? Has he been ordered too?" I said nervously.

Hornblower stiffened then blazed: "Reginald Fielding has been murdered? What prompted such a question? What do you know about Reginald Fielding?"

I opened my mouth to explain, something came out but as a gasp, "Miss Randolph?"

"Reginald Fielding?" "Ser- Reginald Fielding?" "What do you think that Reginald has murdered?"

"Because—he isn't here," I said. "He's the only one who isn't here."

"Oh, process of elimination, eh?" Hornblower rasped, and his tone was dry. "And a guess?"

We were all questioned in the library that morning and, when my name came, I told the Sergeant about the missing rock.

"So, that's why you guessed another crime had been committed," he observed.

"I couldn't believe it when I saw that missing rock, Sergeant," I said. "You told me you were going to have the garden watched."

"Yes," he sighed. "And I thought it was being watched. But what did Callahan do? Got cold, he says. Went to a drug-store, he says. Gulped down some coffee, he says. Went to bed, he says. Well, I'll tell you, that's all right."

Hornblower kept up the questioning until noon.... I learned later that everyone had the same idea.... that is, everyone except Doctor Wayne Courtney.... They were in bed, asleep, from two until three a. m., which was the important time. For during that early morning hour the Keith butler, Reginald Fielding, asleep in his bedroom room, had met his death. Reginald had died instantly, Hornblower told me.

There was an apparent difference in the murder technique this time. Pamela had died of a single crushing blow while Reginald's head had been pummeled.

Countess Fanella was the last person questioned. When Sergeant Hornblower finished with her, he came into the drawing-room called Peter aside and for a few moments talked in a low voice.... Then he started some of his men on the grounds, others in the house, and as we could not leave the house until he said so.

Sandra's frightened eyes swept over all of us. "Does this mean we're all under arrest?" she asked shakily.

Peter said, "No, Sandra. No one is under arrest. But we are all under suspicion. We aren't to leave the house or grounds until further notice. The police are coming back for a long session with us this afternoon."

Marvin Eustace declared through tight lips: "I've an appointment over on the Hill with a senator. It's important."

Earle Pines' lower lip curled outward. "And I've an appointment with my publisher at three." Then he added quite gratuitously, "Mr. Corliss should be attending classes. Doctor Courtney would undoubtedly like to check up on his patients. I feel certain that Mr. Cramer's office in Philadelphia needs him too. But they and we must stay here because the police—"

"Don't worry about me, Pines," interjected Luke Cramer. "I've got a good man holding down the fort."

"I'm not worrying about you," snapped Earl, "or anyone else."

Cramer seemed to ignore that. He said a little hoarsely: "I can have the best detectives in the country down here by night. New York or Philadelphia men. Let's not depend entirely on these local police. For heaven's sake, let's do something! It's been a week today since—"

"But he couldn't go on with that."

Remembering my interview with Hornblower, I remarked: "I think the Sergeant is doing his very best, Mr. Cramer. A careful examination of Reginald's room has been made. There are no material clues. No foot-prints—at least no visible ones, either on the floor or the carpets; no overturned furniture."

I wanted to add that, like with Pamela, there was no sign that Reginald had struggled, but there was something in Luke's face that made it impossible for me to speak of Pam then.

"The only thing they found was the rock beside Reginald's head. It's being tested for fingerprints," I finished.

"Maybe you're right," Luke Cramer said more calmly. "But ye gods, Letty, the police are so slow! And I—I feel morally responsible for Pamela's death. She was worried about something. When I talked with her on the telephone I realized that I should have come, whether I was sick or not." His voice trailed off. "I should have come. I could have come. But how did I know that anything like this—"

"Don't censure yourself, Luke," I interposed. "The important thing to do now is to try to figure out why Reginald was killed."

Even as I said that, I was sure I knew why the butler had been murdered. It came to me so suddenly as I recalled chatting with Reginald in that pantry the other day: His telling me about the phone message around ten o'clock which had followed Luke's call. And Reginald saying, "I never heard the voice before, Miss Randolph. Certainly not over the telephone. Yet, there was something familiar about it. Something I can't quite place. That familiarity worries me, like a tune running through your head and you can't remember its name or where you heard it."

I cudgelled my memory. Had I seen anyone in the hall outside the pantry who might have overheard Reginald and me? Anyone on the patio? In the dining-room? What about the servants' stairs? Charlotte Cunningham might have been listening down there.

No, I couldn't remember having seen anyone when I'd left Reginald in the pantry....

Peter Gibson bent over to whisper in my ear: "I wish to goodness I could get out of here. I've got something I want to do on the Great outside."

"What?" I asked.

"Never mind."

At that exact moment Charlotte Cunningham, coming in from the wide hall, announced: "Luncheon is served, Miss Keith."

And luncheon was—I am not exaggerating—one ghastly meal. The food was delicious, but even the maids serving us were nervous, and no one ate much except Fanella. There was almost no talk at all.

Afterward, we all struggled back to the drawing-room where Charlotte and a little dark-eyed maid served coffee. Finishing my cup, I said, "Don't know about the rest of you, but I could use some shut-eye."

Managing to catch Peter's eye, I gave him a look which I hoped he'd interpret correctly. He did, for, while waiting on the second-floor landing, I soon heard Peter coming up the stairs. As he turned the corner, I caught his hand and drew him into the small, square darkness of a linen-closet. With my other hand I closed the door.

Peter observed: "Well, darling, you do think of the nicest things!"

I couldn't see his face, but I knew he was grinning as he put his arms around me.

"You're off on the wrong track," I remonstrated. "Listen, Peter, I'm going to do some sleuthing up here and you're going to be my lookout."

"And what do you expect to find?"

"I don't know," I whispered. "Maybe some blood. Maybe. How do I know until I sleuth?"

"As if the police hadn't been over all these rooms with a magnifying glass," Peter remarked.

"Just the same I want to look around."

"You don't have a nose for sleuthing, Letty. Not long enough or pointed enough," mused Peter. "That nasal button is a definite handicap. But go ahead and try; I'll watch from the hall. If you hear two knocks, seram!"

Fanella's room yielded nothing but bits of food, a soiled plate from last night's snack, and a lot of clothes that would have been better for pressing.

Luke's room, too, showed lack of domestic discipline. The bad had been poorly made, the rugs needed sweeping, there was dust on the mahogany chest of drawers, tables and chairs. I searched thoroughly but nothing important came to light. Jamming my hands in my pockets in irritation, I suddenly felt something metallically cold against my fingers.

Drawing out the object from my right pocket, I saw that it was a rhinestone clip. I couldn't remember where I'd found it. Then it all came back clearly. I'd run across that glittering bauble in Vic Corliss' tuxedo pocket. Until this moment I'd forgotten the clip completely. Rhinestones don't make me think of Sandra Keith.... She who detested costume jewelry.

Stop Awhile-- And Smile

(By Associated Press)

SEVENTH ARMY, Italy. Sgt. Charles Baker of Williamsport, Pa., was assigned to a forward observation party. He knew an infantry observation post was situated near by, so when night came he decided to seek companionship. After struggling through the underbrush, he came upon a clearing and saw three men forms on the ground.

Careful not to awaken the men, Baker rolled up in his blankets alongside the three. Came the dawn, Baker stirred, opened one eye and looked at his nearest "bedfellow." What he saw set him wide awake and reaching for his gun. There was no mistaking the German uniform!

Then, Baker saw that the three German soldiers were dead.

BANDSMEN IN TUNE EVEN AT THE ALTAR

CAMP VAN DORN, Miss.—Pfc. Charles Jones and Pvt. Mike Bryan, bandmen with Van Dorn, staged a novel double wedding in McComb, Miss., recently. Jones married Miss Beth Sutherland of Tulsa, Okla., in the McComb Baptist church while Bryan and his fiancée were at the altar.

Other guests, so far as postwar demobilization went, the soldiers appeared to have as many ideas as there were soldiers.

In Green Park, hard by Piccadilly traffic, sitting on a bench was Pvt. Frank Beane, 25, single of Washington, D. C.

In civilian life he was a bus driver. He told the United Press that his old job was waiting for him.

"Out my way," he added, "the guys do so much thinking about town-leave and weekend passes they don't think much about getting out of the Army."

Future Planning

"Just yesterday I was talking about planning for the future. It's the trouble with most boys—they don't do any planning. When it comes to postwar planning, they ought to think of the guys with jobs. What good, I ask you, is a guy out of the army when he's out of a job? I ask you."

"The married men ought to go first," continued Beane. "I'll wait. After you've been in awhile it gets so it doesn't matter whether you wait a little longer."

His sidekick, Hollis Fleming, 19, of Cincinnati, O., also single, agreed, "I agreed with the reservations usual to a GI on any topic."

"Not changing the subject," said Beane, "but I've had this town. I've seen it all. What does a guy do now?"

Up and down the park-lined street which runs in a few more blocks into Piccadilly Circus—the Times Square of London—there were American soldiers on leave who liked this or that idea about the postwar.

Few of them agreed about anything, except that the man who fight should be the first to return to civilian life.

RECORD TAXES PAY HALF OF WAR COST

Goal Approached As Cost Of War Is Lowered, Revenue Raised

By GILBERT H. BAKER

United Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The American taxpayer dug deeper into his pockets during the calendar year just ended than at any corresponding period in his country's history, and prospects are that he will pay just as much, if not more, in 1944.

Current expenditures for war purposes are running close to $300,000,000 a day and the administration has said half of these costs should be met by taxation, and not left for future generations to pay.

In 1943 the government asked the country in two war loan drives for approximately $28,000,000,000 and $37,000,000,000 was subscribed, which, with the regular war bond sales to civilians made for a grand total of more than $45,000,000,000 in long-term loans to the government.

As a result of the combined total of $9,000,000,000 over-subscribed in the two drives, the secretary of the treasury was enabled to postpone the fourth war loan drive until early in 1944.

Following up his statement that half of the war costs should be borne by current taxation, President Roosevelt asked congress for an increase of about $10,000,000,000 in additional taxes for the fiscal year which begins July 1, 1944. This was predicated on the estimate that war costs during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1944, would run about $100,000,000,000 and revenues to meet this would be about $38,000,000,000.

Revenue Higher

However, later estimates revised downward the costs of war during the current fiscal year to about $92,000,000,000, while estimated receipts during the period have been revised upward and are now expected to be nearer $41,000,000,000. The gain in both directions, together with approximately $2,000,000,000 in new taxes, which is what Congress seems disposed to grant, will place the country fairly near the President's goal.

However, it is believed in some quarters that the coming fiscal year will see a deficit of about $1,000,000,000, which with the one expected for the current fiscal period, would result in a public debt of about $235,000,000,000.

Plastic Surgery Miracles Aiding Fliers In Come-Back

By DUDLEY ANN HARMON

United Press Staff Correspondent

EAST GRIMSTEAD, England — An American flyer comes to the Queen Victoria hospital here minus a nose — and goes out again with an even better-looking one fashioned from his hip.

Men who have lost their eyelids—and weep constantly as a result—stop crying here; they're fitted with brand-new lids made from the inside skin of their arms.

Miracles of plastic surgery are taking place in this remote English village under the direction of New Zealand, Dr. Archibald H. McIndoe, who spent ten years studying at the Mayo clinic in Rochester, Minn. More than 7,000 operations have been performed since the hospital was opened four years ago. Americans, through the British War Relief society, have just contributed $120,000 to build a new operating clinic. At the moment operations are carried out in the draughty children's ward.

Most of the patients here are men, who've looked in the glass and said, "I'll never be able to work again or marry. I won't even be able to face other people."

Yet, after one or two operations they are amazed to find that they have enough confidence to go, always with another patient, to a factory, where they work in pairs. Some, awaiting further surgery, may have cages on the lower half of their faces instead of jaws. They may be facing 25 more operations extending over two years. Yet many have been offered post-war jobs by the factory management.

I fumbled for words when I saw the bandaged face of an American Fortress pilot, but he was cheerful.

Better Than Before

"You should see the colored photographs taken when I arrived," he grinned. "I look a lot better now."

Fliers with green hands—green from burns—with blistered blackened faces, are given new skin. Half a missing hand is made out of thick skin from the stomach, a part of the body which has a good blood supply. New eyebrows are made from a patient's hair. Noses come from hips, because the hip is easy to get at and the skin easily carved. This hospital owes a great deal to an American physician, Dr. E. C. Padgett, Kansas City, Mo., who invented a skin-removing machine which slices flesh thinner than tissue paper.

Men go about town here in all stages of plastic surgery. Yet nobody stares. This quaint old village is in the front line of the war; the Battle of Britain was fought overhead and the people are used to war casualties. That's one reason it was selected as site of the hospital.

Nurses Best, Pretty

The nurses here are not only the best in their line, but the best-looking girls that can be found. At first authorities feared they might hesitate at sight of the patients. They may not nurse them, though—they marry them. There have been eight weddings since the hospital opened.

Flight Lt. Halebroke Mahn, Denver, Col., not only found new legs here, but also a wife. He spent 14 days in a dinghy in the icy waters of the North Sea. Today he's engaged to the WAAF orderly who gave him his saline baths.

Somehow this hospital manages to be a cheery place. Patients share the same wards so they won't brood

Terms Unfaithful Wife of Soldier Lowest Creature

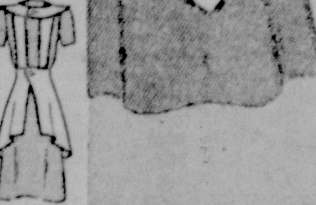

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The unfaithful wife of a husband in service overseas, says Chaplain Major John S. Garrenton, is "the lowest thing I know."

Back on temporary leave after 22 months with the India-China wing of the Army Air Transport command, Major Garrenton observed that marital problems claim an important place on the list of things which men in service discuss with their chaplains, and commented:

"My own personal opinion is that the woman who has a husband overseas wading through hell, sweat and blood and is playing around over here with another man is about the lowest thing I know. And the next lowest thing I know is the man who runs around with her."

Major Garrenton is a Baptist minister. His home is at Portsmouth, Va.

Ohio Has Decrease In Qualified Voters

Columbiana county is one of 32 Ohio counties reporting large losses in qualified voters during the last year, Secretary of State Edward J. Hummel said today.

Qualified voters in Ohio decreased by 414,473, the official said, urging all potential new voters to register in time to ballot during the coming elections.

Columbiana county had 9,249 registered electors in November, 1943. Only 383 new registrations were received during the year and 2,770 voters were put on the ineligible list by withdrawal of their registration cards after the 1942 election. These figures actually concern East Liverpool, where voters must be registered.

Total losses in the state for the year amounted to $541,166, Secretary Hummel said, but this was offset in part by 126,693 new registrations.

Terms Unfaithful Wife of Soldier Lowest Creature

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The unfaithful wife of a husband in service overseas, says Chaplain Major John S. Garrenton, is "the lowest thing I know."

Back on temporary leave after 22 months with the India-China wing of the Army Air Transport command, Major Garrenton observed that marital problems claim an important place on the list of things which men in service discuss with their chaplains, and commented:

"My own personal opinion is that the woman who has a husband overseas wading through hell, sweat and blood and is playing around over here with another man is about the lowest thing I know. And the next lowest thing I know is the man who runs around with her."

Major Garrenton is a Baptist minister. His home is at Portsmouth, Va.

Ohio Has Decrease In Qualified Voters

Columbiana county is one of 32 Ohio counties reporting large losses in qualified voters during the last year, Secretary of State Edward J. Hummel said today.

Qualified voters in Ohio decreased by 414,473, the official said, urging all potential new voters to register in time to ballot during the coming elections.

Columbiana county had 9,249 registered electors in November, 1943. Only 383 new registrations were received during the year and 2,770 voters were put on the ineligible list by withdrawal of their registration cards after the 1942 election. These figures actually concern East Liverpool, where voters must be registered.

Total losses in the state for the year amounted to $541,166. Secretary Hummel said, but this was offset in part by 126,693 new registrations.

Quakers Nose Out Alliance, 36-34, In Exciting Contest

Near Capacity Crowd Sees Salem Cagers Forge Ahead In Closing Seconds To Win

Taking the lead for the first time in the last few seconds of the game, Coach Herb Brown's Salem Quakers posted one of the most thrilling basketball victories in years at the High school gym last night as they nosed out a potent Alliance Aviator squad 36 to 34.

There was a near-capacity crowd on hand to see the thriller—the fourth victory in seven games for the locals this season.

Although the Quakers were never far behind, they came through in the second half to outscore the visitors but couldn't push to the front until the clock had rolled around beyond the last minute of play. The final half was nip and tuck all the way, and the packed gym became a beehive of cheering as the Quakers neared and passed the favored Alliance team.

In the first quarter Alliance scored nine points while holding the Quakers to five. They found they could better the locals only in that first stanza, as the Quakers equalled their 12 points in the second, outscored them 10 to 7 in the third, and finished up with nine points to six for Alliance in the last quarter.

The Quakers in taking their first win in three games, looked more aggressive and full of spirit than they have so far this year. It was the first close test they have had and, according to Coach Brown, they turned in their finest performance.

Outstanding for the locals again was rummy Walter Brian, who captured high scoring honors with 11 points. More important to the Quaker victory was Brian's excellent work under the basket in the last half of the game. The tall Junior pulled down practically all of the rebounds in the last quarter and gave the Quakers the control

Reserves Are Held Scoreless In Last Period, Lose Game

Alliance's reserves fared a little better than their varsity in the preliminary tussle last night as they downed the Quaker underclassmen 28 to 25 in another thriller.

The locals were behind in the first period but managed to step into the lead at the half, and held a 25-23 lead at the end of the third. Alliance put on the defensive team in the final and held the Quakers scoreless while they tallied five points to win.

Don Firsh led Quaker scoring with nine points and Ben Brudery came through with three field goals to total six points. Lew Juliano got two baskets and a pair of fouls for another six points. Alliance scoring was divided between Tanner and Thompson with nine points each.

NEAR PERFECTION - By Jack Sords

SPORT CHATTER

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—That was a right smart idea Lou Little sprang the other day about making football officials keep out of the plays' way. Of course, you might think that Lou meant for them to stay off the field entirely (which might not be a bad stunt, either) but he says all he wants is for them to stay out of the part of the field that the players are using at the moment. How many times have you seen a paunchy referee try to outrun a scabber or serve as an extra blocker? Or a fight ref spoil a bout by spending too much time between the boxers?

EXCESS BAGGAGE
When the Kentucky U. basketball rode in a baggage car on a recent trip, it was hardly a new stunt. A couple of years ago the Bradley Tech football team made a trip to North Dakota and Coach A. J. Robertson saved space for more important travelers by using a baggage car and bunking the boys on rubber beds that could be inflated or deflated at will.

ONE-MINUTE SPORTS PAGE
Sid Luckman will play basketball for the New York Hebrews against the Detroit Eagles in a benefit show here Jan. 16. And probably he'll find that the Bears give the passer more protection. When Gil Godds, a kid who ran in a track suit his mother had made from underwear, saw Don Lash receive the Sullivan award in 1939, he told Coach George D. that he'd rather get that award than anything else in the world. And the Ashland college coach predicted then that Godds would win it—which is real long-range forecasting.

SERVICE DEPARTMENT
Ens. Samuel Cooper, former Oberlin college grid captain, hopes he's waiting for a return-trip to Germany. Cooper was on the 1936 Olympic squad that demonstrated non-Olympic American games at Berlin. His next assignment will be as a merchant ship gun crew captain.

Boxing Looking Forward To Another Busy Year In 1944

This is another in a series, written expressly for The Associated Press, by sports leaders in which prospects for 1944 are discussed.

By APE J. GREENE, President, National Boxing Association, PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 8.—Anemic and scrawny in quality, but well fattened and paunchy in box office appeal, boxing in the United States can look forward to another busy year in 1944.

On the theory that there will always be a tight club so long as the fans are willing to pay for anything that resembles a couple of gloves flailing the air, promoters the country over are setting up for a big year. Lifting of dimouts in coastal areas has added to their anticipation. Ball parks and outdoor arenas are being figuratively white-washed for a grand summer spurge.

But what of the future? Therein lies the rub.

As one of the major sports industries of the country, boxing can stand to have its collective nose rubbed in the sand a bit. Baseball has its major and minor league organizations, its Judge Landis. Football has its leagues and its Layden. Boxing has its National Boxing association, which around the country has done a mighty good job in holding the lines for the various boxing commissions and in providing an effective line-holder against contract-jumpers and the like, as well as maintaining the best ratings system.

Cleveland Progress Noted
But N.B.A. doesn't have New York in its membership, and so long as the juicy bait of Madison Square garden payoffs remains without the N.B.A. organization, there will be bountiful mutiny.

In spite of the marked progress other key cities in the country—notable Cleveland, Philadelphia and Los Angeles—have made in staging major attractions, New York, with its Garden and its man, is still the mecca to which star entertainers turn. The National Boxing association, with most of the states in its membership, commands a wholesome respect among the fistie fraternity, who carefully avoid conflict with its regulations. But they risk an NBA frown for the juicy steaks a Madison Square Garden bout will hold for them.

In this new year, and in anticipation of the day when thousands of new-found boxers and fans return from the wars, boxing has got to cut its cloth to a new pattern of decency and universal ethics. Otherwise, how can the farcical dual championships which consistently crop up to plague the game be averted?

Picture the fantastic situation in the lightweight ranks today. N.B.A. recognizes Sammy Angott as champion by virtue of the fact he's never been defeated at the lightweight limit. New York, by a series of lightning pinpoints, pins the title gem on Beau Jack. Since it is by common consent agreed that Angott and Jack will hold for the two meet at the 135 pound limit and end the fantasy?

Not As Lightweights
But the box office men say nay. Angott and Jack will meet—in New York, mind you—but at the lightweight limit? Certainly not. It will be for 10 rounds, over the weight, and the fans will like it or stay away from the Garden, which of course they won't do, money being the prolific commodity it is today.

East Liverpool Defeats Weirton Squad, 38 to 27
Experiencing little difficulty with their visitors last night, the East Liverpool Pottery won their second victory in three starts, 38 to 27, over a rangy but not too powerful Weirton, W. Va., cage squad.

The Pottery led all the way, starting with a 12 to 7 lead at the first quarter and holding it at 24-19 by halftime. In the third stanza they scored six while Weirton went scoreless. Each team collected eight points in the final quarter.

Liverpool point-makers were Bob Skidmore with 12, Bill Patterson with ten, while Chuck Means and Bill Horton got five each.

East Liverpool plays at Bellaire tonight before entertaining the Quakers in Liverpool next Friday evening.

RAILROADS EXPECT
PEAK LOAD IN '44

Fifteen Percent Travel Increase Seen With Equipment Less

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Travelers in the United States will cover more miles in 1944 than in any single year in the history of the country—on diminishing numbers of trains, buses, and passenger cars, government transportation authorities said today.

The Office of Defense Transportation anticipates a 1944 mileage increase of 15 per cent in military and civilian passenger travel, and a three to six per cent jump in freight, on railroads that were reported to be straining to the limit months ago. There will be virtually no new equipment added, except for locomotives.

Officials emphasized that the figures on anticipated increase do not take into account the additional load expected to be imposed on railroads by diversion of passenger and freight normally carried by rubber-borne vehicles.

Pressed into service to absorb this record load will be every piece of rolling stock not considered dangerously obsolete and the most officials hope for is that the country will "get by."

Readjustment Seen

Railroads also face the prospect next year of having to readjust to a lopsided flow of war materials and troops to the West if Germany collapses. Plans already have been made to cope with this situation, with Gulf coast shipping, operating through the Panama canal, being relied on to carry much of the additional westbound freight.

But the big question mark of 1944 transportation is:

"Will there be enough essential trucks, buses, and passenger cars on the road?"

Rubber Director Bradley Dewey answered this question for United Press. He said there is no cause for alarm in this respect if "all do their part," but warned of serious shortages that will hurt the war effort if any group falls down on its job.

"The outlook for 1944 is admittedly tight," he said. "If all do their part so that production comes through, and if those who have tires do not abuse them, and if they get out of these tires all the service that is in them, then there is no cause for alarm. But if these things do not come to pass, serious shortages will impair parts of the war effort."

Will there be "tires for everybody" before the end of the war?

New Tires Just a Dream

Dewey said it would be "foolish to dream" of tires for non-essential driving "at a time when existing automobiles must be treasured, when the manpower to build new tires and repair parts is non-existent, when gasoline is short, and when repair mechanics are in the Army."

He estimated that the synthetic rubber industry will produce 818,000 long tons in 1944 to fill increased requirements for that year that now total 950,000, compared with 530,000 tons for 1943.

The difference will be made up from the present stockpile and expected imports of about 80,000 tons of natural rubber.

The railroad picture for 1944 stacks up like this:

Passengers: conservative government figures estimate that travel in 1943 will total 80,000,000,000 miles. An increase of 15 per cent is expected in 1944, and it will be greater if the tire situation gets worse.

Twelve hundred troop sleepers are being built but it won't relieve civilian conditions much because railroad pullmans were supplying only about 65 per cent of army needs, anyway.

An unestimated number of coaches will be withdrawn from

Reveal McCoy Will
After Grave Probe

WASHINGTON COURT HOUSE, Jan. 8.—The bodies of the slain Elmer McCoy family were reinterred last night after autopsies conducted in a search for new evidence in the Thanksgiving Eve triple murder.

As guards especially deputized kept watch at nearby Bloomingburg cemetery, the coffins were lowered into the large single grave from which they were removed yesterday.

Prosecutor John B. Hill said the autopsies which took more than 17 hours to conduct, "were very satisfactory." He declined further comment, but it is known the body of Mrs. McCoy, 64, was subjected to minute examination in an effort to locate a .38 caliber bullet similar to those with which McCoy, 39, and his daughter, Mildred, 22, were slain.

Although 32 caliber bullets were found in her body previously, the discovery of a .38 caliber slug could show the same weapon was used on all three victims, Hill had said previously.

Two guns were used in the slaying, but neither was located. A search of the coffins dispelled rumors the death weapons might have been buried with the McCoy's.

Meanwhile, it was determined three survivors would share equally in the $35,000 McCoy estate. They are Mrs. James L. Collett, who is McCoy's sister and wife of the hog breeder charged with killing the family; Dr. J. A. McCoy and Mrs. Sylvia Adkinson, both of Washington Court House and brother and sister of Mrs. McCoy.

Elmer McCoy's estate was estimated at $36,619. Mrs. McCoy's at $24,205 and the daughter's at $1,161.

FBI Probes Fake Calls

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The FBI has begun a probe into the identity of a mysterious "Miss Wainwright," who on two occasions has called next-of-kin of military personnel reporting that their servicemen-relatives were safe, following official announcement of the loss of their ships.

active service during the year, and cannot be replaced.

Freight: ODT anticipates a three to six per cent increase over 1943. While this will be the smallest percentage increase of the war, officials point out that it comes on top of an expected over-all 1943 increase of 15 per cent in terms of miles, and a 35 per cent increase in 1942, the first year of war.

Britain's Women's Land Army numbers about 60,000.

PREDECESSOR OF NEW ALLIED JET-PROPELLED PLANE

A FORERUNNER OF THE JET-PROPELLED FIGHTER PLANE announced by Great Britain and the United States is the similar jet-driven, propellerless Caproni-Campini, pictured top. It was designed and built for the Italian Air Force by Secondo Campini in 1911-42 and was reported to be a success. Arrows in diagram indicate how the plane operates. Air enters plane's nose (A) and is forced into an air expansion chamber (B). From the motor-driven compressor (C) the heated air is propelled backwards along the convergent tunnel (D). With its increased temperature and velocity, the air issues in a jet from the tail (E), propelling the plane forward at high speed.

existing heavy bombers to obtain flash performance. This would help big planes take off more swiftly with heavier loads or give them added speed in getting away from attackers.

In addition, he said, this type of engine might be put into the new giant B-29 bomber for long-range attacks on Japan itself.

De Seversky, who led Russia's Baltic sea lighter command in the last war and had a leg blown off when he was shot down, said the jet engine works in reverse—it can bring the craft to a quick stop or slowdown as well as give it more speed.

He said the device is "in itself a reactive engine where gases burn and expand rapidly and where the reaction is controlled through a specially designed jet, controlled by the pilot, to get a maximum thrust (speed)."

Eventually, he said, there will be "no limit" to the jet propelled plane's speed.

The War Today

Well, while they are a famous fighting people they aren't inclined to jump without looking. Apparently the thing which restrained them was fear that the Allies wouldn't be able to provide quickly enough the supplies and equipment which Turkey needed. So the position has remained in status quo, without prejudice to a quick move on the part of Turkey.

That's how delicately the Balkans are balanced at the moment. As things stand Marshal Tito is carrying a large part of the burden on his stout shoulders, which accounts for the Allied efforts to aid him with technical experts and supplies.

There's another element which is likely to influence the situation greatly. That's the Red drive towards the Rumanian border. Already there is panic in that country, and it's reported that civilians are being evacuated from the province of Bessarabia. Arrival of a Red army in Rumanian territory would be like a torch in a powder barrel. Then anything could happen on the Balkan peninsula.
